OUR NAVAL FORCE

COMMANDER RUSCHENBERGER has just issued an order suspending drills in the Naval Battalion until October, and has reported to the Adjutant General the completion of the three eight-day cruises on the U. S. S. Shearwater which were ordered as the Naval Militiamen's summer tour of duty. This marks the official end of the current season, and from now on until autumn the members of the battalion will use the organization more as a yacht club than as a school of military instruction.

The first of the three cruises was under command of Commander Ruschenberger himself, who took the Shearwater down into Chesapeake Bay, where he had been invited to join Commander Geer of the Maryland Reserve, who was anchored off Lone Point with the U. S. S. Dale (an old receiving ship) and the U. S. S. Silvia, a Glasgow built steam vessel which the government had turned into a gunboat during the Spanish war. The U. S. S. Syren and the U. S. S. Restless with crews of landsmen from the regular service and commanded by Lieutenant Castleman of the regular navy, who had been ordered to report to Commander Geed, were also present making a little fleet of five vessels when the Shearwater arrived.

After the usual official visits had been paid it was decided on the following day to make a sham attack on the peaceful citizens of that part of the Maryland shore. Accordingly the steamers, proceeding inshore in column of vessels and then taking up position in line so as to bring their guns to bear, soon had the Marylanders at their mercy, whereupon landing parties were called away and each vessel sent ashore a section of light field artillery in the pulling boats. These were quickly landed and position taken up on the beach without any worse casualties to the invading party than wet feet. After this the whole battery gave an artillery drill for the benefit of the Mayor of Baltimore and his party, who had come down to see the drill and to be present at a dance that was given in the evening for the regular militiamen.

The following day the Shearwater proceeded to Annapolis, where, by the kindness of the Commandant, Commander Charles E. Badger, the whole of the crew was taken ashore and shown all through the Naval Academy grounds and buildings, after which the return trip to Philadelphia was made without incident.

The second cruise under command of Lieutenant H. H. Smith was considerably marred by a great deal of rain and by several hard blows during one of which the Shearwater began to drag anchor and gave the crew a chance to exercise some practical seamanship. Lieutenant Smith proceeded down the bay to the Delaware Capes, where he took on provisions at Lewes and then went out to sea, stopping for a while at the fishing banks to give the crew a chance to fish and then steaming on off to the southward intending to have target practice. In this he was disappointed as it came on to blow and got so rough that gun pointing was out of the question.

The last cruise, which ended August 15, was taken out by Lieutenant Commander Joseph M. Mitcheson, who anchored off Cape May one night and then took the Shearwater up to Atlantic City, arriving at high tide so as to get in over the shoal spots. The Shearwater proceeded in and anchored in the thoroughfare off the Inlet pier, and had hardly swung to the tide before she was hailed by a launch carrying Lieut. Col. Thos. Potter, Jr., Assistant Quartermaster General on the staff of the Commander-in-chief, who is a member of the Atlantic City Yacht Club, and came off with several officials of the club to tender the hospitalities of the club. The Colonel was a visitor to the Shearwater several times after this and came out the last time flying a commodore's flag, to which official position and rank all hands were glad to learn he had just been elected. After spending three days at anchor and carrying out the prescribed routine of drill and exercises with a liberal allowance of shore leave, the Shearwater got under way and returned slowly to Philadelphia, anchoring one night near Ship John Light.

While these Shearwater cruises are not as comfortable as those which the battalion usually makes annually on board one of the larger vessels of the navy, and while with her limited deck space and equipment the opportunities for drill are not as good, there is still this distinct advantage that all the work that is done on the Shearwater is done by the militiamen themselves as there are no outsiders of any kind, either pilots or engineers on board. The men, get the valuable training which comes from a sense of responsibility and the feeling in the mind of each that he is a necessary part of the mechanism of the ship and in no sense an understudy to the man at the wheel or the man at the steam valve, but that he is that man himself.

The battalion now has enough men to form two complete engine room crews for the Shearwater. One of these crews went out with each of the first two cruises, Ensign Shaw acting as chief engineer. The crew for the third cruise was made up of volunteers from the two regular crews with the addition of a couple of former members of the battalion, who went along for the fun of the trip and the healthy exercise incidental to shoveling coal, the whole crew being in charge of a naval militia machinist.

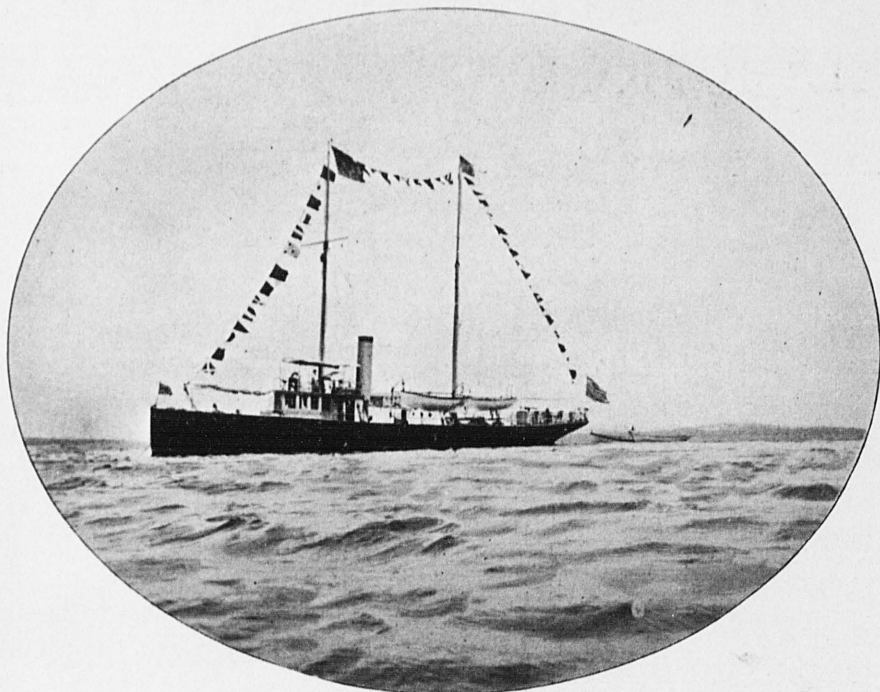

COLONEL ROBERT GRIER LE CONTE

Col. Robert Grier Le Conte was born July 17, 1865, at Deal Beach, N. J., the son of Dr. John Lawrence Le Conte and Helen (Grier) Le Conte. His ancestors on his father's side were Huguenots, who left France at the time of the revocation of the Edict of Nantes for Holland, going later with William and Mary to England, and emigrating to this country about 1698. His paternal grandfather was Major John Le Conte. His maternal grandfather was Justice Robert C. Grier, of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Dr. Robert Grier Le Conte lived in Europe until the age of seven; when he returned to Philadelphia to receive his early education at Miss Haven's school and at the Episcopal Academy. He entered the College of the University of Pennsylvania in 1881, graduating in 1885. He at once entered the Medical School, graduating in 1888. He became resident physician at the Pennsylvania Hospital in October, 1888, and held the position until June, 1890. From 1890 to 1892 he studied in Europe, at Berlin, Vienna, Heidelberg, Paris and London. Since 1892 he has been engaged in the practice of surgery in Philadelphia.

Dr. Le Conte holds the following hospital positions: Surgeon to the Pennsylvania, to the Children's and to the Bryn Mawr Hospitals; consulting surgeon to the Germantown Hospital. He served for five years as surgeon of the Third Infy. in the National Guard of Pennsylvania, and during the late Spanish-American war was assistant surgeon with the rank of ensign in the United States Navy from May until September, 1898.

On February 18, 1903, Dr. Le Conte was appointed by Governor Pennypacker Colonel and Surgeon General of the National Guard of Pennsylvania.

SKETCH OF CAPT. P. LYLE WEAVER

Captain Weaver was born in Philadelphia 1857, and was the youngest son of the late Major David P. Weaver, who for many years was prominent in military and political circles. Captain Weaver has been closely associated with the National Guard of Pennsylvania for the past thirty-five years. As a boy he was a member of the North East Grammar School Cadets, which was assigned to the Guard in 1868 as Company "G" Third Infty. He was promoted to corporal and also to quartermaster sergeant of that company, and in 1870 he was made a member of the "National Guards," now the Second Infty., N. G. P. Together with his brother, the Captain was detailed as a "marker," and they were equipped in miniature with the handsome full dress uniform of the old regiment of that time. In 1877, the Captain received commendation from his superior officers "for his coolness and bravery in attempting to open telegraphic communication from the Round House, in Pittsburgh, where the Philadelphia troops were beleaguered by the terrible mob of rioters. While in the telegraph office, the Captain was struck and injured by a brick thrown by one of the rioters, but stuck to his post at the key until he was driven out by the flames, through the rioters setting fire to the building and was slightly wounded by a pistol ball during the march through the town.

He served successively as corporal, and sergeant of Company "A," and in 1880 was promoted to regimental quartermaster sergeant. A year later he was elected first lieutenant of Company "K" and two years after that, in 1883, was elected Captain of that company, serving five years, and retiring from active duty on account of the demands made upon him by his profession, a newspaper man.

For a number of years he has been well known as a writer upon matters military and especially the National Guard of Pennsylvania. The Captain has always endeavored to uplift the Guard, and has criticised without fear or favor. His caustic articles upon the late Twentieth Infty. were mainly the cause for the disbandment of that malodorous command.

During the Spanish war he was one of the war correspondents for the New York Herald and saw active service in the Porto Rico campaign.

The military department of the Philadelphia Inquirer, which has been under his direction since its inception, eleven years ago, is to-day the standard for current news and comment affecting the troops of the State.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST REGIMENT INFANTRY OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Philadelphia, August 25, 1903.

To the Commanding Officer:

Co———, ...Regiment N. G. P.

Sir:—

The issue of the U. S. Magazine rifle (Krag Jorgensen) makes it imperative that additional safeguards be provided for the protection of life and limb of participants and residents in vicinity of the First Regiment rifle range, thereby reducing the possibility of accident to a minimum, if not impossibility.

The increased penetration, greater dangerous space and longer range of the small bore rifle, make it a very dangerous weapon, in the hands of a novice.

Therefore the Rifle Range Committee of the Association of the First Regiment Infantry of Pennsylvania invites the attention and co-operation of the commandants of the several organizations using the range to the amended rules and suggestions, to attain this object, as follows:

RULES AS AMENDED.

Under no condition will the following persons be allowed to use the range:

Members of organizations in arrears for rent.

Members of organizations failing to register name, rank and organization, each day before practice.

Who have not been instructed in sighting, position and aiming drills, and mechanism of the rifle.

Who have not previously practiced, unless accompanied by a competent instructor, of which the Rangemaster shall be the judge.

Ammunition must be issued only at the firing point, by the officer in charge, and only as it is to be expended.

Any man who loads the magazine of his rifle, except as provided in the regulations, will be debarred from further use of the Range.

No person will be permitted to shoot more than seven (7) shots consecutively at any range when others are waiting for fire.

The position, at 200 yards firing point, shall be standing; at 300 yards kneeling, or sitting; at all other points prone, with head toward the target. This will be strictly enforced.

No one will be allowed to enter the butts, for any purpose whatever, unless by special permission of the Rangemaster.

SEVERAL of the line officers of the 18th Inft. speak seriously of a contemplated change in the field of the regiment and it is pointed out that a prominent and representative citizen of Pittsburg connected with the Carnegie Company and deeply interested in military affairs would be a most desirable and valuable acquisition to the command. It is further intimated that the gentleman might be prevailed upon to assume the responsibilities of wearing the silver oak leaf.

The regiment at the present time is sorely in need of finances and is required to pay $21,000 by October 1st as a second payment on the purchase of their present ground and quarters, which cost is $100,000. Some of the company commanders say that this money will partly be raised by the $2,400 armory rent and a portion of the city appropriation. Assuming that the captains are willing to turn in the entire $6,000 received from the municipality and the $2,400 from the State, it will still leave a deficit of $12,600. To raise this difference is quite a problem.

It may be that on the return of Colonel Rutledge, who has been quite ill for the past two months and at the present time is convalescing in the mountains, will devise ways and means to adjust the matter. It is also stated that many prominent members of the veteran corps are willing to assist the active command financially and otherwise.

The site purchased is admirably located for an armory and it is earnestly hoped that the business community of Pittsburgh will realize the importance of having a military fortress in their city.

The armory conditions of the 14th Inft. are lamentable and steps should be taken to properly house this excellent organization.

RIFLE PRACTICE in the First Brigade for this season will be somewhat of a failure. The Range at Essington controlled by the Association of the First Regiment is being repaired as rapidly as possible, but by the time the company commanders get the men in line for practice the season will have been nearly ended, and unless an extension is granted for this brigade, few companies will have an opportunity of practicing the necessary percentage required in order to secure the $100. There is also a difference of opinion in the several Philadelphia companies, as, for instance, some captains in the Second Regiment prefer taking their men to Norristown on the range of Company "F," 6th Regt. Infty. Several line officers of the 6th Infty. are endeavoring to qualify their men at the Doylestown range. These arrangements seem expensive and impracticable, and it is hoped that the several commanding officers will discourage this move and lend their entire support to the efforts of the 1st Infty.

COLONEL LOUIS A. WATRES, Colonel Henry T. Decher and Major William S. Allen, members of the Executive Committee of the State National Guard Association, will shortly hold a conference to decide upon the date for the annual meeting of the State Association, which will be held in the city of Scranton, Governor Pennypacker, Major General Miller, Generals Gobin, Stewart, Schall and Wiley and many prominent officers in the line, are expected to attend. Strong resolutions affecting the armory question will be presented and other matters of vital importance to the National Guard.

General Stewart has kindly consented to give Colonel Watres a sufficient amount of transportation to have each command represented at the Convention.

Second Troop

The Second Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry, has a unique arrangement in filling such vacancies as may occur by expiration or otherwise. Six or eight young men between the ages of sixteen and eighteen are enrolled as cadets and go through the same work as the troopers and take part in all ceremonies excepting State occasions. The parents of these young men are required to give their full consent to their future enlistment in the troop so that the time and energy spent in training them will not be lost. Arriving at the proper age and physical requirements, they are regularly enlisted in the troop. In this manner a high standard of efficiency is continually maintained.

Sixth Regiment

Several changes have recently been made in the Philadelphia battalion of the 6th Infty. and Colonel Coryell, with the assistance of Major Lucien M. Wiler, is determined to put this section of his regiment on a solid basis. Captains Dagit and Bowers have resigned their commissions and it is expected that Lieutenant Lelar and several others will follow.

Thirteenth Regiment

Company "B" of the Scranton City Guard (13th Infty.) recently received from the Philippines from their former first sergeant, William E. Rafter, the following collection of souvenirs: One Filipino sabre from Ramblin; one Filipino hat from Cubatuan; one Iggorote arrow from Maasin; 1 1-2 lb. shell from gunboat Concord captured during the battle of Ramblon; one Filipino Mueligerte bucket or bamboo slud in which the juice of sap of the cocoanut tree is brought to the ground and is called tuba; one Filipino Malay knife from Jaro, Panay; one Spanish soldier's Mauser outfit from Manila. The officers and men of Company "B" are very grateful for the kind remembrance of their former first sergeant and through "Our State Army and Navy" Journal wish to express their appreciation and thanks.

On Tuesday evening last (August 25th) Capt. M. S. Gould held an election in Company K, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Walter S. Capwell. J. M. Edwards was elected unanimously.

Eighteenth Regiment

The veteran corps of the 18th Infty. will shortly celebrate the 72d anniversary of their original organization, the Duquesne Greys, by field exercises, including guard mounting and other ceremonies and in the evening a grand entertainment will be given. Colonel Lewis T. Brown, Colonel Guthrie and other prominent officials are interested in the affair.

State

Colonel Frank K. Patterson, Inspector General of Rifle Practice, Colonel Lewis T. Brown, aide-de-camp on the staff of the Commander-in-Chief; Major Lew A. Anschutz, the Quartermaster on General Wiley's staff; Captain W. J. Livingston, Quartermaster of the 14th Regt.; Captain A. P. Davis, of the 14th.; Captain W. A. MacNary, of the 2d Brigade staff, and Captain Schaffer, of the 18th. Regt., visited Camp McKinley of the Ohio National Guard, and were royally entertained and received by General Dick, author of the "Dick Bill." In return they were presented to Governor Nash and a conference was held wherein a plan was outlined to mobilize the Ohio and Pennsylvania Guardsmen in one grand camp to last eight or ten days. The Pennsylvanians were enthusiastic regarding the matter and feel that the project is feasible.

Naval

The members of the Naval Force are unanimous in voting Colonel Thos. Potter, Jr., Assistant Quartermaster General, a thorough good "sailor man," and the several messes of fish which he sent the ship's company were greatly enjoyed.

Erratta

The statement made in the last issue of the Journal that Colonel Chas. C. Pratt, on the staff of the Commander-in-Chief, had presented one hundred photographs to Company "E" of the 13th Infty., should have read Company "G," 13th Infty., located at Montrose.

COLONEL PAUL S. REEVES

About the middle of the 17th century there came to this country a sturdy people who sailed up the Delaware river and located on the eastern bank of that stream, a few miles below Philadelphia, and from these strong, hardy adventurous immigrants have descended many men of character and business ability. Avoiding conflicts either with the natives or their civilized neighbors, they lived in peace during the many trying times, strictly attending to their business and household duties and established in their posterity an honorable inheritance. Prominent among these is the subject of our sketch, Colonel Paul S. Reeves.

Strictly energetic and yet cautious, Colonel Reeves conducts his business in a thoroughly modern manner and at the same time carefully avoids any tendency of sensational methods. That he and his sons have been successful is largely due to the time and attention that Colonel Reeves personally devotes to the business. Colonel Reeves was born near Woodbury, N. J., September 10, 1837. His parents were Biddle Reeves and Sarah Scull, both of them members of the Orthodox branch of the Society of Friends. He is descended from an old and honorable family that came to America in 1660.

Mark Reeves, the first of that name to make his home in the vicinity of Philadelphia, was one of the paternal ancestors.

Colonel Reeves was instructed at home until his ninth year, when he was sent to the Friends School of Westtown, Chester Co., Pa., an old and highly esteemed place of learning. Mr. Reeves was a pupil there for more than six years. Completing his course at Westtown he returned to his home at Woodbury, where he remained until his eighteenth year.

It was for him a very important day when he left his home on November 11, 1854, to engage in business life. He secured employment in the capacity of clerk with the firm of Reeves, Buck & Co. of Philadelphia and Phoenixville, now the Phoenix Iron Co. and with them thoroughly learned the iron manufacturing business. There was not a feature of that trade which he had not acquired a thorough knowledge of while passing through the various positions which he successively held from the clerkship to the superintendency of various departments. He acted as superintendent until 1867, when he went into business on his own account and was admitted to the firm of Pennypacker, Evans & Reeves. This concern at that time was prominent in the hardware trade. For two years Mr. Reeves devoted all his energies to the building up of that firm's business, his general knowledge gained while in the employ of the iron manufacturing company greatly aiding him.

There was, however, a brighter field open for Mr. Reeves. On January 1, 1869, he entered the brass foundry and smelting business. At that time the foundry and smelting works on Broad street above Catherine was not nearly so large as it is at the present day, but it was on a portion of the present site, 760-762 South Broad street, that what is now the firm of Paul S. Reeves & Son began business.

As business increased the firm enlarged the works from time to time until now it is one of the most important concerns of its kind not only in Philadelphia but in the United States.

Mr. Reeves, upon the completion of his son's course at college, determined to take him in business with him and as soon as possible after Alfred Scull Reeves had acquired a sufficient knowledge of the trade, the firm of Paul S. Reeves & Son was established. Colonel Reeves lost his son, A. S. Reeves, December 18, 1900. He to a great extent relieved his father of the work of conducting their large business, but Col. Reeves is still the active and actual head of the firm. His youngest son, Samuel Kreamer Reeves, upon the completion of his college course, also became associated with his father and brother in the business, but left them for a time to serve during the Spanish-American war with the First Troop, Philadelphia Cavalry.

Although in his 64th year Mr. Reeves is as vigorous mentally and physically as a man a number of years his junior; indeed he is in the prime of life.

Mr. Reeves is greatly interested in literature and art, being an active member of the Art Club. He is a student of history and his interest therein lead him to secure membership in the Historical Society, of which he is a prominent member.

Mr. Reeves is also a member of the Union League, the Bourse, Trades League and the Maritime Exchange and is one of the trustees of the Phoenixville Hospital.

On Oct. 19, 1850, Mr. Reeves and Katurah Kreamer, daughter of the later Samuel Kreamer of Phoenixville, were married. They have three children, two sons and one daughter.

Colonel Reeves was appointed Lieutenant Colonel and aide-de-camp on the staff of the Commander-in-Chief, Feb. 18, 1903.

The Rangemaster shall have absolute charge of the range, and any competitor or soldier, either in practice or competition, refusing to obey the Rangemaster or his assistants, or violating any of the rules and regulations governing the Range, or of being guilty of unruly or disorderly conduct, or being intoxicated, or having in his possession any spirituous or malt liquors, will be immediately ruled off the Range; and, upon being reported to the Association, may be by it disqualified from further use of the Range.

Any person firing when the danger disc is shown, or knowingly discharging his rifle except at a target to which he has been assigned, or firing on the wrong target, will be disqualified, from further practice.

Any competitor or other person found with a loaded rifle, except at the firing point when about to shoot, or who shall discharge a loaded rifle, except in accordance with the regulations, shall be promptly ejected from the grounds.

Any objection to the record of a shot as marked, must be made before another shot is fired; and the challenge must be accompanied by $1.00 to receive attention. If the challenge is sustained, the money will be refunded; if not, it shall be forfeited to the Association.

SUGGESTIONS.

1. Regimental Commanders are requested to detail a commissioned officer in uniform, each day assigned the command, who will supervise the practice and be responsible for the conduct of the men.

2. That the indiscriminate issue of arms and ammunition be not permitted and only issued at the Range, and that about five rifles be kept there for practice, and none be allowed to be carried to and from the Range.

3. In order to facilitate practice, and that every man may be able to qualify, it is suggested, that not more than one hundred (100) men be sent to the Range on the day set for the exclusive use of the command.

Leases will be transmitted at an early date, which we will be pleased to have signed and returned before opening of Range, on or about September 1st next.

NIAGARA FALLS.

Niagara Falls is one of the grandest and most widely advertised of Nature's Masterpieces, and has been so often pictured and described that at first view nearly every one experiences disappointment, but a few minutes bring back the realization how marvelously great and powerful is the flow of water and how truly magnificent is its scenic beauty.

The Philadelphia and Reading's cheap excursions every season have enabled numbers to view the Falls, and this year the Special $10.00—Ten-day Excursions will leave Philadelphia September 10th and 26th, and October 8th.

The Excursionists by the Reading—Lehigh Valley Route, leaving Reading Terminal 8.30 A. M., have a daylight trip through the beautiful Lehigh and Wyoming Valleys, affording a view of fine mountain scenery, itself worth the cost of trip, and arrives at Niagara Falls in the early evening. A dining car is attached to train, meals being furnished table d'Hote at 50 cents per capita.

Opportunities are afforded for several stop offs on return trip. Tickets are good going only on special train and good to return within ten days on all regular trains.

NOTE ON THE INJURIOUS EFFECTS OF THE GASES PRODUCED BY SMOKELESS POWDER

My attention was recently attracted by an article in the Archives de Medecine Navale by Medecin Principal Docteur Torel, M.F. and believing that the subject matter is one of general interest to military surgeons I have prepared a résumé of Dr. Torel's careful and exhaustive study.

As the result of numerous analyses made by himself and others Dr. Torel concluded that carbonic oxide and nitrogen dioxide or other nitrogen-containing gases are those producing the principal deleterious effects when combustion of nitro-cellulose compounds takes place in a confined space.

He describes in detail the results of target practice on board the Massina, April 2, 1902. The Ship's bow pointed due north and she had the target on her starboard beam, hence six shots were fired from the starboard 274 millimeter gun instead of three shots each from starboard and port guns as was customary. A gentle breeze was blowing from the east which made the gases of combustion flow back into the turret each time the breech was opened. The intervals between the shots averaged from two to four minutes. No sooner had the firing ceased than Dr. Torel was summoned to the turret to see the "boatswain's mate, the gun captain," who had fallen over in a stupor.

The patient was found unconscious, his face pale and bathed in a cold sweat. The pupils were dilated, the limbs and body shaken by convulsive movements. Respiration was labored and jerky, the pulse small and irregular, the heart movements feeble and tremulous. His condition improved somewhat when he was stretched out on deck in the open air, but the epileptiform movements were of such violence that the patient was with difficulty conveyed to the sick bay. The symptoms continued for half an hour and the patient was delirious, unable to stand on his feet, jabbering and mumbling like a drunken man. When the power of articulate speech returned he complained of severe frontal headache, extreme lassitude and pain in the pit of the stomach. He stated that before losing consciousness he had been seized by hazy vision, vertigo and sharp precordial pain. The gases in the turret were so thick that the men only saw each other as through "a heavy, reddish fog of acrid suffocating odor."

The "quartermaster gunner" in the same turret experienced similar vertigo and nausea and dyspnea. He complained all day of headache and anorexia.

Dr. Torel performed the following experiments: A rat weighing 89 grammes was placed under a glass bell jar of 160 centilitres capacity, the rim heavily ringed with vaseline to prevent leakage. Four grammes of smokeless powder were put in the jar, but 1-5 grammes were found unburned when the jar was lifted. The rat died in 5 seconds with pupils dilated and limbs in spasmodic contraction. In removing the dead rat a large part of the fumes escaped, filling the room with an acrid irritating odor.

A rat weighing 195 grammes was now placed under the same bell jar from which the fumes had largely escaped. Death occurred in 15 seconds after several squeaks, jumps and 3 or 4 convulsions. From a careful examination of the facts Dr. Torel concludes that the carbonic oxide is only in part responsible for the accident in the turret and the result artificially produced under the bell jar, and regards the nitrogenous vapors liberated as the principal toxic agent. In other turrets and on other ships similar accidents have been not infrequent and the author goes on to emphasize the importance this matter would assume in battle. He argues that the possible disabling of a gun's crew from insufficient ventilation of a turret where smokeless powder is employed for the charges must be regarded as a more serious consideration than the slight diminution of their safety from the enemy's fire which might arise from installing inlet for fresh air.
